

Abstract

A liquid crystal display module is disclosed that has an optical sheet supported by a main support. In the module, the optical sheet is secured to a main support through a first securing point close to one corner at one side and secured to the main support through a second securing point close to each corner at the opposing side. In this liquid crystal display module, deformations in the optical sheet caused by applied heat from the light source is reduced or eliminated.